

Copyright © Policy

Australian copyright law comes from the Copyright Act, a Commonwealth statute, and from court decisions. The Copyright Act came into operation on 1 May 1969, and has been amended many times since then, most recently in December 2006. The current Copyright Act replaced an earlier Act, which was based on UK copyright law.

Material on this site is copyright. You may download, display, print and reproduce material from this site in an unaltered form only for your personal, non-commercial use or use within your organisation. Providing a link to this website is permitted, we request however that 'deep linking' is avoided.

Be aware that Copyright protection gives the copyright owner a legal basis for taking if copyright is infringed. Apart from any use as permitted under the Copyright Act, all other rights are reserved.